Air Force Names 1978 For Temp. Major, Promotions Extend Through 30 April

(Names on Pages 2 and 8)
THE Air Force has released the names of 1978 captains selected for temporary major. They will be promoted in increments through 30 April.

Last month, the Air Force chose approximately 4000 first lieutenants for temporary captain.

The selections to major include 1795 line officers, 11 Chaplains, 5 Medical Specialists, 18 Dental, 46 Medical Service, 69 Medical and 29 Nurse captains.

The senior man on the list of line officers to major has a date of rank in 1943, with the next three names dating from 1944. Numbers 5 through 8 hold dates of rank in 1945 and Numbers 9 through 13 rank from 1946.

The 1947 group includes Numbers 14 through 25; 1948 dates are held by Numbers 27 through 32; 1949 by Numbers 33 through 66; and 1950, Numbers 67 through 1303.

The 1951 group begins with Number

Warning: Take Home Pay Will Drop In January; $28.72 Is Maximum

Deduction Table, P. 3

The Services are notifying all military personnel to be prepared for a drop in take home pay beginning in January, when 2½ per cent Social Security deductions will start.

This is part of the new Survivor Benefits Law, which will provide greatly improved benefits for military families.

Heart of the new law is the placement of Service people under permanent Social Security coverage, eliminating the temporary $160 wage credit for all ranks.

Beginning in January, deductions will be made up to a maximum of $94.50 per calendar year.

Social Security deductions are made only on the first $4200 of basic pay.

This means that Servicemen who receive less than $4200 basic pay will have 12 equal monthly deductions. However, where pay exceeds $4200, the procedure will be to prorate the deductions during the months when the Serviceman receives the first $4200.

Thus, a major with over 14 years service will be taxed at $11.58 per month for the first eight months (January through August), will pay $1.86 in September, and have no deductions from his pay for Social Security in October, November and December.

A general with over 30 years service will find his take home pay reduced by $28.72 in January. For a recruit, the deduction will be $1.76.

Navy Names 1575 For Rank Boosts

A Navy selection board has picked 1503 Regular and active duty Reserve Line Lieutenants—2425 fewer than were chosen by the fiscal '56 board—for advancement to Lieutenant Commander.

Of the total number named, approximately 240 are Reservists. In making its selections, the board passed over approximately 11 per cent of the officers in the 1400-man Regular promotion zone which extended from Lt. Paul W. Manley, USN, Signal Number 16888, through Lt. Ward H. Broadfield, Jr., USN, Signal Number 18296, in the 1 Jan. 1956 Regular Register.

Included in the selections are 1361 unrestricted officers and 126 restricted officers. Sixteen of those named are WAVES who were picked by a separate board.

The board, which met on 2 Oct., considered all officers with dates of rank of 1 July 1953, and earlier, who reported to active duty before 1 July 1956.

At the same time, the Navy announced that 71 Regular Line WAVE Lt's(jg) were tapped for two stripes by a board which convened on 23 Oct. This board considered all officers with dates of rank of 31 Dec. 1954.

In addition, a third board, which met on 9 Oct., named Capt. William H. Christensen, USNR, inactive, for promotion to two-star rank in the Dental Corps.

AF Chooses Temp. Line Majors

THE following are the names of the 1795 line Air Force captains selected for promotion to temporary major. The names are listed in sequence, showing the effective promotion dates.

The Air Force said that in previous programs officers could not assume higher rank until receipt of promotion orders. This is now changed. Officers will be permitted to assume the higher grade on the date the promotion schedule indicates.

Officers are being advised, however, that this does not constitute necessary authority for increased pay and allowances.

Streamlined 101st Races Through Rigorous Troop Test JUMP LIGHT At Campbell; "Screaming Eagle" Leaders Enthusiastic Over Changes; Sec'y Stresses Role

Secretary Wilber M. Brucker, in a '56 Army Progress Report made public this week against the background of fighting in Hungary and the Middle East, had this to say of the new 101st Airborne Division at Ft. Campbell, Ky:

"With greater mobility and increased firepower, the new organization under consideration will contribute greatly to the Army's ability to intervene quickly and effectively, if need be, in limited wars. The fact that such divisions may be more quickly moved over long distances by air increases their deterrent value in connection with both limited and general war."

"The airborne division, particularly, is able to fulfill the role of the 'fire brigade,' moving quickly to troubled spots wherever they may arise and stamping out aggression before it has a chance to expand into general war which the whole world seeks to avoid."

The Secretary's statement comes at a time when THE JOURNAL has just completed a second visit to Campbell to observe progress of the current test program underway there, involving all elements of the 101st.

FT. CAMPBELL, KY.

THE 101st Airborne Division, which won glory at Bastogne during the fateful Winter of 1944, this Winter will set the stage for sweeping changes in Army organization and doctrine with the completion of Troop Test Jump Light, one of the most important field tests in Army history.

Reorganized at Campbell on 21 September, the first day of Fall, under command of Maj. Gen. Thomas L. Sherburne, USA, the "Screaming Eagles" are rushing through a series of tactical tests to meet an urgent deadline.

On 22 March, the second day of Spring, Lt. Gen. Thomas F. Hickey, USA, Third Army Commander at Ft. McPherson, Ga., must report to General Willard W. Wyman, USA, Commanding General of the Continental Army Command, on the successes and shortcomings of the streamlined 101st Airborne Division and its potent and unprecedented organic atomic capability.

There is speculation already that on the basis of the Jump Light tests conducted to date, the Army will not wait for the final evaluation to begin reorganizing other divisions, such as the 82d Airborne at Ft. Bragg, N. C., to conform to the PENTAGON concept.

"It's too early for any final assessment," says General Sherburne at his command headquarters here, "but the officers and noncommissioned officers of the 101st are convinced that new battlefield requirements will require new types of organization featuring small, independent battle groups that can move anywhere in a hurry and get the job done quickly."

FEW IN THE ARMY DOUBT that ROTAD (Reorganization of the Airborne Division) will be strongly endorsed by General Sherburne, General Hickey and General Wyman, as well as by Brig. Gen. Roy E. Lindquist, USA, who is on-the-spot chief of the Jump Light evaluation team, and by Maj. Gen. Paul D. Adams, USA, who commands the XVIII Airborne Corps at Bragg of which the 101st is a part.

The final Jump Light report, which will be rushed through CONARC at Ft. Monroe, Va., for top-level Pentagon analysis, will examine in voluminous detail the comparison between the Standard Airborne Division, such as the 82d and the 11th Airborne in Germany, and the ROTAD 101st.

Specifically, the report will go into all ramifications of the key decision to slash division strength from 17,000 to 11,500 officers and men.

The Army's drive for airborne mobility has seen the 101st eliminate such items as 138 medium tanks, 2 light tanks, 19 tank recovery vehicles, 9 armored personnel carriers, 24 twin 40mm. guns, 48 quad 50's, 364 50 caliber machine guns, 18 155mm howitzers, 29 105mm. howitzers and 547 2½ ton trucks.

101ST LEADERS—Maj. Gen. T. L. Sherburne, USA, Commander of the 101st Airborne Division, Col. Melvin Zais, USA, commander of the Division's 187th Airborne Infantry Combat Group and Col. Russell M. Miner, Commander of the 506th Airborne Infantry Combat Group, watch the JUMP LIGHT test of Colonel Zais' Headquarters and Service Company in the field at Ft. Campbell, Ky.

"In a sustained action," General Sherburne comments, "we would need support, of course, but our light weight gives us the capability of moving into a situation fast, getting our job done and moving out. We are designed essentially for assault mission."

In this connection, General Sherburne notes that the current tests of the 101st are placing great emphasis on the "snatching" of units, usually by Fairchild C-123's, after they have been sent into action.

THE GREAT STRESS in making and keeping the 101st slim and quick will be assessed by skilled evaluators in terms of what must be given up in staying power.

The Jump Light study also will survey the effects of the elimination of a level of command by creation of five combat groups of integrated arms in place of three infantry regiments and nine infantry battalions.

At Campbell, close attention is being paid to the operation of a revolutionary Support Group, headed by Col. Alan Strock, USA, who is a line officer. He is responsible for all logistics support for the division in a centralized set-up that eliminates many logistics responsibilities at company and regiment level. For example, all second and third echelon maintenance is done at division level, instead of by the battalion in the standard airborne division.

DESPITE ITS REDUCED MANPOWER, the 101st will pack increased rifle power. General Sherburne's five combat group commanders will control a total of 300 rifle squads, with 3300 men. This compares with 243 rifle squads of 2187 men in the other airborne divisions.

Each 101st combat group has five rifle companies, contrasted to three in the current airborne infantry battalion.

The increased use of organic aviation is being scrutinized with special care. The 101st now has 53 organic helicopters and fixed wing aircraft, but the expectation is that this number may nearly be doubled before the division is finally placed in full "combat ready" status, probably in late Spring.

All together, Jump Light will see some 28 TO&E units put through exhaustive field tests.

NONE WILL BE MORE IMPORTANT than those involving the Honest John Rocket battery, which packs the division's atomic punching power. The Honest John actually is only an interim weapon for the 101st; it will be replaced by the highly mobile Little John. Again, the emphasis is on reduced weight.

Closely related to the evaluation of the 101st's atomic capability are urgent problems of communications, which will be aggravated by a new "spread battle" tactical doctrine which calls for widely dispersed units.

Another problem of vital concern to General Sherburne and his combat commanders is the matter of target acquisition. They say that the Army must be provided with improved resources for acquiring targets. Some officers of the 101st express the belief that specialized jet reconnaissance aircraft would be used to great advantage.

As Jump Light continues through December and January, with work on the final report set to begin in February, the 101st also is training large numbers of soldiers. It is estimated that about 4500 men—over one third of the division—will have taken jump training as well as other recruit training at Campbell.

The unusually high experience level of its officers and noncommissioned officers is a major reason why the 101st will be able to push through its high speed test program with its radically new organization and tactical doctrine and at the same time conduct an extensive basic training program.

General Sherburne comments that most of his officers have seen action in two wars. This is true also for hundreds of enlisted men in the 101st, more than a hundred of whom served with the "Screaming Eagles" in WWII. More than 200 soldiers of the 101st have made over 100 parachute jumps.

THE 18TH AIR FORCE of the Tactical Air Command is providing what General Sherburne describes as "terrific cooperation" in the training and testing of the 101st. Whatever the overall Army-Air Force differences of viewpoint regarding airlift support, the 101st says it is getting all the lift that is required at the present time.

However, it is to be noted that Troop

Here Is What You'll Pay For SS

THIS table shows the monthly rates of Social Security deductions for military personnel on active duty beginning in January. The deductions are made at a rate of 2½ per cent up to $4200 per calendar year, or a maximum of $94.50.

The fractional part of one additional monthly deduction which may be required in the case of personnel receiving more than $4200 per year in basic pay is computed as follows:

Determine the sum of the regular monthly deduction which would nearest reach $94.50 and then subtract the total from that figure. Thus, a colonel with over 18 years service would pay $16.15 for five months or a total of $80.75. The next month, his deduction would be $13.75, which is the difference between $94.50 minus $80.75. After that, there would be no further deductions for the remainder of the year.

Blandy Medal Goes To CNO Burke

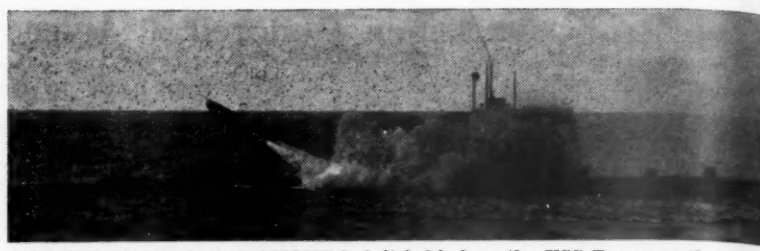

Admiral Arleigh Burke, USN, Chief of Naval Operations, will be the recipient of highest honors of the American Ordnance Association when he receives the Blandy Gold Medal on 5 Dec. at the 38th Annual Industrial Preparedness meeting of the Association at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York City.

This announcement was made by V. Adm. George F. Hussey, Jr., USN-Ret., president of the Association.

In the citation accompanying the award Admiral Burke is acclaimed for his "Accurate appraisals and alert strategic planning which have helped to insure maximum readiness of our Navy as an instrument of National Policy." The citation further refers to his aggressive and vigorous military leadership which has placed the seaborne fighting forces of the nation at highest efficiency.

The Blandy Medal was founded by the Ordnance Association in memory of the late Admiral W. H. P. Blandy, USN, who during WW II was Chief of the Bureau of Ordnance of the Navy and directed U.S. naval amphibious forces in the Pacific. He was in charge of the atomic bomb tests at Bikini Atoll, June-July 1946, and at the time of his retirement from active naval service in 1950, he was Commander of the Atlantic Fleet. Admiral Blandy died 12 January 1954.

Some 2,000 members of the Ordnance Association will be on hand to greet Admiral Burke.

A BLAZE OF FIRE AND SMOKE is left behind on the USS Tunny as the submarine fires a guided missile into the skies. The Chance Vought surface-to-surface weapon is launched within minutes after the sub comes to the surface and the ship plunges back beneath the water before the smoke clears away. A sister ship, the USS Barbero, also launches the missile.

USMC Uniforms Can Be Tailored Overseas

Marine Corps officers now are authorized to have uniforms made by local tailors in overseas areas, according to an order issued this week.

The material for the uniforms, however, must be obtained from the Marine Corps Supply Activity, Philadelphia, Pa. Requisitions for materials and patterns can be made by overseas supply officers directly to the Philadelphia Depot. The requests should contain pattern size and must cite the activity's allotment of funds, HQMC said.

At overseas stations which do not have a supply officer, requests for material may be made by individual officers. In such cases, local Commanding Officers must insure that uniforms manufactured conform exactly to requirements of Part B, Chapter 49 of the Marine Corps Manual.

The names of the new warrants and their categories are:

Aviation Operations Technician—James A. Thomas.

Machinist—Garland E. Moore, Jack A. Munsee, Robert J. Noonan and David J. Thompson.

USN Warrant Manual Set For Distribution

The "Manual of Qualifications for Warrant Officers" (NavPers 18455) is expected to be available for distribution to all ships and stations in January 1957.

Developed from recommendations submitted to the Board to study LDO and WO Status, the Manual is designed for use as a guide in selection of men to warrant ranks, determination of warrant complements and allowances, distribution and assignment, and development of training requirements.

It contains separate sections which apply to each of the 24 warrant officer categories, including supply clerk (798).

Marine Board Picks Women For Two Bars

A Marine Corps selection board has picked 100 per cent of Women Marine active duty 1st lieutenants who were eligible for advancement to the temporary rank of captain.

The board, headed by Brig. Gen. August Larson, USMC, Assistant Commanding General, 1st Marine Division, Camp Pendleton, Calif., named the entire slate of 17 women officers for increased grade.

The promotions are scheduled to be effected on 1 Jan. 1957.

Those chosen are:
Watson, Patricia A. Rober, Inger Russell, Marguerita C. Devos, Frances M. Wagner, Barbara A. Hayes, Theresa M. Smith, Mary S. Ray, Irene L. Halvorsen, Marie J. Voigt, Mary L. Schofield, Beverly Wever, Donrue Moroney, Ellen B. Wrenn, Jenny Fless, Jane D. Flocca, Helen L. Kramer, Carol A.

The board met on 1 November.

Kill Marine Package Liquor Sales Order

A new Marine Corps Order kills the requirement that officers and staff non-commissioned officers must sign a statement each time they buy a bottle of liquor.

Under the old rule, every time a bottle was sold a statement had to be signed certifying "that any alcoholic beverage purchased by me will not be resold or exchanged and will not be transported off the property under Navy jurisdiction."

The decision to eliminate the repetitious declaration of honesty, which tended to reflect upon the integrity of officers and men, is an outgrowth of an article — later made official Marine Corps policy — by Col. Robert D. Heim, USMC, in the May issue of the U. S. Naval Institute Proceedings. One point made by the colonel was that the "Special Trust and Confidence" set forth in commissions was being destroyed by policies and directives which deal with minutiae.

The new rule, in addition to permitting liquor sales to officers and Staff NCO's in uniform, and to those who present ID cards, allows individuals to take the liquor home.

The order states that the following notice must be prominently posted in all package sales stores:

"Persons transporting alcoholic beverages off a military reservation become subject to the laws of the District, State or Territory within which the station is located."

MIDSHIPMEN CRAFT

Stephens Brothers, Inc., of Stockton, Calif., has been awarded a contract of $1,088,300 for construction of five patrol craft to be delivered to the U. S. Naval Academy, Annapolis, Md. The 80-foot craft, known as YPs, will be used for training midshipmen in seamanship and navigation, and will have basic modern operational and navigational equipment. Each YP has a 17-foot beam, wooden hull, displacement of 65 tons, and is capable of speeds in excess of 10 knots.

Admiral Wright Holds Top-Level ASW Meeting

Admiral Jerauld Wright, USN, Commander-in-Chief, U. S. Atlantic Fleet, recently held a Special Conference dealing with the design of future submarines and anti-submarine ships.

The high-level meeting, which was held at the Admiral's Norfolk, Va., Headquarters on 24 Oct., brought together designers and operators for an exchange of ideas.

The designers, led by RADM. Albert G. Mumma, USN, Chief, Bureau of Ships, included 15 other key officers and civilian technicians from the Bureau of Ships, the Bureau of Ordnance and the Bureau of Aeronautics. Admiral Mumma, in addition to heading BuShips, also holds the title "Coordinator of Shipbuilding for the Naval Establishment."

Representing the operators were members of Admiral Wright's Staff and more than 100 officers from major Atlantic Fleet commands, including more than 10 two-star officers.

RADM. Irving T. Duke, USN, Director, Fleet Development and Maintenance, attended the meeting as CNO Arleigh A. Burke's representative. Three Pacific Fleet officers also sat in on the highly classified discussions.

The size and scope of the meeting, said Admiral Wright, "points up the emphasis now being placed on anti-submarine warfare. In the event of war, Russia, with an undersea fleet of some 450 submarines, would pose a serious threat to our sea life-lines. To meet this threat we need the best anti-submarine ships possible."

The discussions included extensive briefings by Bureau officials on submarine and anti-submarine equipment and ships under development and on the drawing boards.

The briefings were followed by an exchange of ideas between "operators" with submarine and anti-submarine experience and the "designers" of ships and equipment.

A history of public relations, entitled "This High Name," written by Capt. Robert Lindsay, USMC, has been published by the University of Wisconsin Press.

The book is said to be the first to detail the public relations activities of any military Service for commercial publication. The volume is available from the University of Wisconsin Press, 430 Sterling Court, Madison, Wisc., and sells for $1.75 a copy.

Captain Lindsay, who teaches Journalism at the University, saw action as an enlisted man and an officer in both WW II and the Korean War.

Navy Hopes To Resume Seawolf Tests In Dec.

The Navy has expressed the hope that it will be able to resume dockside tests of the nuclear-powered submarine USS Seawolf at the end of December.

Progress on the Navy's second A-sub was delayed in September when the nuclear plant's cooling system developed leaks. On 6 Sept. the Navy said the delay would be for "several weeks."

The Navy explained last week that no difficulty has been experienced with the nuclear reactor itself, but only in its cooling equipment. The safety of the plant has not been impaired, the Navy said.

The Seawolf's reactor is cooled by liquid sodium and is the only plant of this type installed or planned for installation in a naval vessel.

The Nautilus type plant, which makes use of pressurized water as the cooling agent, is used in all other A-ships which are being built.

The two plants, said the Navy, were begun simultaneously because the need to develop a nuclear-powered submarine was great and it was not known then which type of plant would be the more successful for submarine propulsion.

Both the Nautilus and Seawolf were built for the Navy by the Electric Boat Division of General Dynamics Corp., Groton, Conn.

The country's 488th Reserve Officer Training Corps was activated on 16 Oct. when an NROTC unit was established at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

The new unit brings to 53 the number of Naval Reserve units in being throughout the nation's colleges and universities. The Army has 255 ROTC units and the Air Force 180.

Between 35 and 40 M. I. T. freshmen will make up the first class. Capt. Joseph S. Lewis, USN, reporting from Naval Base, Newport, R. I., has been named Professor of Naval Science at M. I. T.

35 ton bomber gets carrier shakedown

Largest and most powerful aircraft ever to operate from a carrier deck, the Douglas A3D Skywarrior has now completed landing and takeoff tests aboard the U. S. S. Forrestal—the Navy's mightiest carrier. Able to deliver the A-bomb, at speeds above 600 mph, Skywarrior is designed to extend our carrier's striking range beyond any point yet reached.

Second Air Force Stresses Individual

The importance of the individual in the Strategic Air Command occupied the attention of Second Air Force Personnel Officers during a two-day conference at Barksdale AFB, La., last week.

Maj. Gen. R. M. Montgomery, USAF, Deputy Commander for the Second, addressed the opening day's meeting and stressed the "overwhelming need to retain technicians and specialists in the Air Force."

General Montgomery reviewed the current policy of emphasizing the role of the individual, with concern for his duty conditions, his family and his overall welfare.

Col. Edward P. Russell, USAF, Second Air Force's Director of Personnel, directed the conference to make continual advancement in the personnel field.

"While Second Air Force has continually paced the Strategic Air Command in retaining key personnel," stated Colonel Russell, "the fact remains that we should retain twice the present number of specialists. It is the job of every man in the Air Force, not only to do his part well, but to help the commander and the supervisor 'sell' the Air Force to the individual."

Speaking to the conferees were CWO Ben Kohot, Headquarters, Strategic Air Command, and Second Air Force Personnel Officers including Lt. Col. John M. Kirklin, Lt. Col. William B. Hinds and Capt. John D. Nolan.

REFUELING FOR FJ-4s

Flight Refueling, Inc. has been awarded a contract for approximately $2 million by North American Aviation, Inc. for the design, qualification testing and production of hose reel units for aerial refueling of Navy FJ-4 Fury jet fighters according to Charles W. Newhall, Jr., president of the company. The units to be installed in the FJ-4s are for use in a "Buddy System" which enables an FJ-4 "tanker" to refuel its fighter counterpart in flight, greatly extending the range or permitting greater bomb loads to be carried.

Classroom Depicts AF History and Tradition

Col. William D. Hopson, USAF, former Lackland AFB, Tex., deputy commander, officially opened the history and traditions classroom located on the west end of the Orville and Wilbur Wright Plaza there last week. Assisting him in the ribbon-cutting ceremonies was Maj. Gen. John Ives, USAF, Continental Air Commander.

Others present at the opening of the ultra-modern brick and wood veneer classroom included Maj. Gen. Carl A. Brandt, USAF, commander of the Technical Training Air Force, and Brig. Gen. John Ives, USAF, Continental Air Commander.

The history and traditions classroom is a display of Air Force progress—from the earliest aircraft engines to modern day guided missiles. The classroom will become part of the training program at Lackland as well as serving as an Air Force museum.

Highlight of the displays is a fully-equipped Spad, the little Allied fighter which played an important role in the European skies near the close of World War I. The biplane, in perfect condition, came from Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio.

A complete display of aircraft engines beginning with the old Hispano-Suiza, powerplant for the Spad, down through the J-35 jet engine are part of the classroom. Topping the engine displays are two rotary type engines from the WW I fighters, which found the unusual engines the answer to the weight problem.

Both engines revolve around the crankshaft, doing away with the burdensome water-cooling systems and making the fighter much lighter. Tales of how the whirling engines would whip the planes out of German gunights are among the favorites of old fliers.

The twin-six Liberty engine is another of the unusual motor displays. The younger brother of the Liberty 12, the engine has a dual bank of cylinders and a cannon barrel running down the middle.

The actual wind tunnel model of the first American jet, the Bell P-59, is exhibited in the classroom along with a scale cutaway model of the Wright Brothers first plane.

Three dimensional dioramas of the important events in aviation history and a continuous-run movie by Walt Disney depicting the development of the airplane are other attractions in the classroom.

Dawn-to-dark firing tests speed delivery of the mighty power plants that will thrust America's missiles into outer space.

On the line...rocket engines for America's major missiles

Deep in the remote canyons of the Santa Susana Mountains, a bolt of flame knives the sudden darkness of a California evening.

Obscured in the shadows—watching this man-made lightning flare and die as it has an untold number of times before—are the men of ROCKETDYNE... testing and tuning the giant propulsion systems they are building for the major missile projects of the Air Force, Army and Navy.

This amazing rocket engine workshop was planned as far back as 1947, about a year after ROCKETDYNE—in collaboration with the Armed Services—began a program of research that has led to accomplishments so fantastic, security restrictions forbid us to describe them.

The fact that this work is so far advanced here in America is cause for sober confidence in our defense situation. It is good to know that these achievements are in the service of free men.

We will welcome your personal inquiry for more detailed information regarding our work in this field. Please write: ROCKETDYNE, Dept. J-71, 6633 Canoga Avenue, Canoga Park, California; or Dept. J-71, Neosho, Missouri.

Disarmament — Soviet Version. Russia's usual mastery of the propaganda statement was badly upset by the timing of its newly announced disarmament proposals. The first two-thirds of the statement is Communist propaganda, pure and simple, castigating Great Britain, France and Israel for "aggression" and praising the "heroic resistance of the Egyptian people." World opinion of its own brutal crushing of the Hungarian people is passed off as "attempts being made to whip up a slanderous campaign against the Soviet Union in connection with the failure of the counter-revolutionary military plot against the people of Hungary." While word was on all the press wires of all the free nations that 20 more Soviet Infantry Divisions had arrived at Budapest to join the 15 armored divisions already there in the liquidation of the Hungarian nationalists, the Soviet statement was blandly denying that there was "any mobilizations and movements of its troops on the frontiers." In fact, it emphasized, despite the fact that the world well knew otherwise, that its "troops are busy with their service duties and are at their usual bases." Furthermore, directly following the Soviet statement, UN Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge informed the UN that we have confirmed information that at least 16,000 Hungarian citizens from Budapest alone have been taken from their homes, crowded into box cars and shipped to the interior of Russia, probably to labor camps in Siberia.

Near the end of the statement, the USSR gets down to making some proposals for disarmament. But these do not stand up under scrutiny and must be classified as propaganda just the same as the long preamble. They propose that our NATO Air Force and ground troops quit Western Europe within two years. This would mean we would withdraw our forces 3,000 miles to our homeland, while presumably, Russian forces would draw back a few hundred miles to their own borders. (Apparently they believe this would make little difference since the note boastfully states that "It may openly be said that the strategic situation developed in Western Europe is even more favorable for the armed forces of the Soviet Union than was the case at the end of the second World War when the fully mobilized and equipped Soviet army was able to gain a firm foothold in all of Western Europe, had the Soviet Union set itself such aims.")

Progressive reduction of the military strengths of the powers is also proposed as well as the banning of atomic and hydrogen weapons, the complete destruction of stockpiles and the immediate cessation of nuclear testing. All of these they have made before, but fail to offer any workable controls. The latest statement repeats the earlier suggestion that control posts be established in each participating nation to check movements at "big ports, railway junctions, motor highways, and airfields." Such puny means obviously would be ineffective, particularly in Russia whose territory is three times the expanse of ours and where it is perfectly clear that our observers would be chained to their designated posts and prevented from seeing what is going on elsewhere. President Eisenhower's earlier, and more workable suggestion, of unrestricted aerial observation is too efficient for Russia, but in the latest note while belittling aerial photography as a means of controls, the Soviets say that they will consider the question of employing it "to a depth of 800 kilometers east and west of the demarcation line," that is the border between the NATO nations and the Russian satellites. Thus, the Kremlin is seriously suggesting that they be allowed the privilege of aerial observation 500 miles beyond their satellites which would bring all of West Ger-

Movement to Alaska

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

A recent message, circulated by The Adjutant General, Department of the Army, from Commanding General, Alaska, occasions this purple-faced roar. The specific matter involved can best be seen from the following quote from this message:

"This headquarters has received many requests for movement of household goods and dependents from applicants who certify they were informed, by representatives of personnel officers at old duty stations, there was no need to apply for concurrent travel to Alaska as all such requests had been disapproved. Based upon this information members, moved dependents and household goods to a designated point under assumption they could apply for further movement at a later date. Personnel moving dependents to an alternative point under provisions of paragraph 4 of AR 35-3045 are not entitled to further movement of dependents and household goods overseas. It is requested that future authorized personnel assigned to Alaska apply for concurrent travel and be informed of the provisions of AR 35-3045."

My two points of irritation are these: First, it is obvious that the "members" who moved dependents and household goods under the erroneous assumption that they could apply for further movement at a later date were forced to spend a hell of a lot of money to move them to Alaska at a later date or were denied the pleasure of their dependents' company and use of household goods because of the error. This does not appear to me to be in consonance with the Department of the Army's present objective of making service careers attractive. In fact, the "members" caught in this mis-information bind can hardly be blamed for turning in their suits immediately. My second point has to do with the smart-aleck "representatives of personnel officers at old duty stations." These gentlemen, of whom there are all too many in the service, apparently have given misinformation in an authoritative position and with the voice of authority. This is a well-known device for moving people out of the office with a pat answer without going to the trouble of finding out whether the answer is valid or not. Who will take action against these people, which should be a minimum be action to recompense the misinformed "members" for their completely uncalled for and formidable expense. Further action, depending on the degree of negligence found in the "representatives of personnel officers," of a disciplinary nature should be taken against individuals responsible for the misinformation, and still further action to insure that information of this type is put out only by persons with a real knowledge of the facts in the matter.

Social Security Numbers

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

I should like to pass on a suggestion recently voiced by an officer which I think has much merit and should be seriously considered by DOD if they are not already doing so.

Since all military personnel on active duty will be placed under the Social Security System on 1 January '57, the suggestion is that the present military serial or service number be discarded and replaced for all purposes by the single social security number.

This number would be used by an individual beginning with his Selective Service registration or first enlistment and on through active or inactive duty, regular, reserve, or national guard component as the case may be, for all military, social security and VA Administration. Service numbers already assigned of holes, further leading to the conclusion that the statement is pure propaganda.

Nevertheless, the United States has no intention of abandoning its ideal of an eventual workable international understanding on arms limitation. Perhaps after unrest in the satellites, and in the Russian homeland, becomes greater and more difficult to handle, the Communists may be brought to the point where they will be forced to make acceptable guarantees. In the meantime the United States and our allies in the free world must remain strong.

IN THE JOURNAL

10 Years Ago—Soviet Russia's acceptance (although with a troublesome reservation as to time) of our recent invitation to join us in disclosing the numbers and locations of troops at home and abroad, was generally viewed as increasing the likelihood of serious discussions on reduction and limitation of armaments. So it could be, for it is apparent that before there can be intelligent consideration of any arms reduction program there must be substantial information upon present armed forces, of all large nations, at home and abroad, in all categories.

50 Years Ago—The wealth of the United States increased from $88,526,348,796 in 1900 to $106,881,415,000 in 1904, according to a bulletin made public by the Acting Director of the Census. This is a gain of $18,355,066,211, or 20.7 per cent, in the four year period.

90 Years Ago—The officers of the Army stationed at Fort Monroe have drafted a petition to Congress, asking for an increase of their pay, which has been signed by all the officers stationed at that post, in the Military District, and at the headquarters of the Department of the Potomac at Richmond.

would be phased out (used concurrently with the SS number) over a period of the next five years as dog tags, ID cards, service records, etc. are replaced or made obsolete. Individuals entering on active or other service after a specific date (say 1 July '57) would begin using the SS number alone in place of an additional service number.

Looks simple—and would get rid of at least one of the multitude of registration numbers to forget or confuse.

1ST LIEUTENANT, USA

AFFE vs. 7th Army

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

In the issue of 20 Oct. on page 12, under the heading "Memo," I noticed an item that I would like to comment on. The following sentence is extracted from the paragraph concerning General Gruenther's retirement: "Army leaders point out that Lt. Gen. Bruce Clark's command includes thousands more soldiers than the Army Forces Far East/Eighth Army."

It is obvious that the Army leaders referred to are completely ignorant of this subject or they would not attempt to compare the relative responsibilities of the Commanding General, Army Forces, Far East and Eighth Army, vs. the responsibilities of the Commanding General of the Seventh Army. Just for the sake of the record, I would like to point out that the Commanding General, Army Forces, Far East and Eighth Army is responsible for the training, logistical support, operational planning and operational command of over three quarters of a million officers and men. As a matter of fact, the active combat divisions under his operational control exceed the total of those available to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Air Force Production Chief Tells Problems of Missile Future

(The following are the remarks made by Maj. Gen. David Baker, USAF, of the Air Materiel Command, in an address before the Aviation Writers Association in Washington, D. C., on 16 November. General Baker was introduced by Mr. LeRoy Whitman, Editor of THE JOURNAL, which sponsored the luncheon meeting.)

LET there be no mistake that we are gradually yet certainly moving toward the era of guided missiles. Today, approximately eight per cent of our deliveries are for guided missiles.

Maj. Gen. Baker

Five years ago less than one-tenth of one per cent of our total dollar acceptance was for guided missiles and three or four years from now we estimate that the percentage will greatly increase, possibly to 35 per cent. What is going on today in this area is more of a revolution than an evolution.

The impact on the Air Force and industry will be as great or greater than that experienced when we went from Signal Corps observational missions to combat aircraft.

THE GUIDED MISSILE ERA brings with it many new problems and requires many changes in concepts and policies. Many of these problems are common to those we encounter in our advanced supersonic manned vehicles. These include the need for greater automation of our production processes, with new requirements for highly skilled personnel. Also, there are common requirements for new materials such as titanium and stainless steels and new production techniques and manufacturing methods.

During my limited time, I must pass by these types of changes and concentrate more on those which are peculiar to the missile era.

There are many factors which generate and influence the problems in missile development and production, but the one that stands out above all others in importance is complexity. As we substitute a machine for the thinking process of man, we automatically introduce great complexity no matter if the machine is to provide difficult mathematical solutions, operate machinery or defeat our enemy. In fact, the latter because of its difficult requirements becomes most complex of all. What are some of these new problems which we can foresee in the future?

THE NEED FOR INSTANT REACTION, as well as the inter-relationship of all missiles and weapons, requires complete systems integration as contrasted to island defense which worked effectively under the control of the human brain and human reaction times of our manned combat vehicles. This requirement undoubtedly means that we must obtain increasing scientific and engineering support from industry to assist the Air Force in developing and keeping together all elements of our forces, particularly in the Air Defense area.

We must link and integrate the several combat functions of detection, warning, and tracking of the enemy weapons with the aiming, firing, guidance control and target kill of our own weapons. This means a continuous and positive tying together of what would normally be considered separate systems each tremendously large and complex in its specialized function. Radar screens, communications, trajectory calculation and analysis, interlocking of defense centers, weapons selection, operational launching of weapons, ascertainment of destruction, and the final "all clear" must be welded into a single, automatic system.

THIS INCREASED INDUSTRIAL SUPPORT will call for a much more intimate and complete participation and cooperation between industries at all levels. The products of the electronics, aircraft, aeronautical, radio, communications, television, electrical, and accessories industries must be engineered into each other and time-phased in both development and production. The Air Force can serve as the focal point for leveling and balancing these efforts, but the major burden of accomplishment will fall to industry.

Secondly, and within the overall system integration, we must more closely integrate our individual weapons systems than ever before. The greatly increased complexity of these guided systems will force us to withdraw somewhat from our Government Furnished Aeronautical Equipment procedure, particularly during the development period. We must rely more on our prime manufacturer to assemble a complete guided system for us.

However, in doing this we can not abandon our current policies which require our primes to work with the existing and capable engine electronics, armament and related industries in both the development and production of the new weapons.

TO ABANDON OUR EFFORTS in this regard would introduce major problems in standardization, duplication, increased costs in facilities and production and loss of a suitable mobilization base.

To avoid these major problems we as well as our primes, must continue to utilize the strong subcontractor potential, the excellent specialized industries and the small business structure available in this country. However, a much closer relationship must be developed between primes and supporting industries and companies than has been evident in the past.

We are facing major problems in the area of procurement. Through the past decade we have developed and utilized good yardsticks for measuring our production efficiency. The Air Force, as well as each company in the industry, recognized the validity of such yardsticks as cost per pound of airframe weight. The guided missile has so reduced the importance of airframe weight as compared to electronics, propulsion and control items that the old efficiency measuring devices have become somewhat obsolete and we are endeavoring to acquire new experience data which industry was well as we can use as a guide in evaluating our missile costs and determining our relative efficiency.

ANOTHER OF OUR MAJOR PROCUREMENT problems is that of forecasting the time of successful missile availability. As you are aware, predictions have been made since early after the close of World War II for the successful completion of operational missiles. In such a rapidly advancing art, it has been virtually impossible to cut off performance levels of the missiles because of the rapidly increasing performance of the offensive weapons both manned and unmanned.

The prediction problem here is most important in terms of the predication of our budgets, the formulation of our training programs, and the development of operational and tactical doctrine. As experience is gained in both the development and production of missiles, we are able to introduce greater realism into our forecasts and are approaching the point where we can reasonably predict technically acceptable weapons.

OUR FACILITIES PROBLEMS are changing today and will continue to change as we move further into the missile era. We will, of course, need newer and more accurate types of machine tools which will also be needed for our newer and faster manned aircraft. In addition, and even more important, it is probable that new brick and mortar will be required to provide missile development and production facilities in areas where missiles can be tested. Also, some of our older aircraft plants have not been readily adaptable to missile production and are being replaced with more modern plants which over the first few years of production will more than pay for the investment.

BRIG. GEN. C. W. ABRAMS, USA, left, Office of the Assistant Chief of Staff for Reserve Components, Department of Army; and Brig. Gen. P. F. Lindeman, Chief, Army Reserve and ROTC Affairs, both from Washington, are welcomed to Headquarters Continental Army Command by General W. G. Wyman, Commanding General, and Lt. Gen. Ridgely Gaither, Deputy Commanding General, Reserve Forces. Some 150 officers from Department of the Army, the six continental army commands and CONARC met at Fort Monroe, Va., for the Department of the Army's Seventh Annual Reserve Training Conference.

However if new plants are deemed necessary for development and production of missiles whether paid for partially or completely by industry, the industry must plan to dispose of existing aircraft plants for military use as new plants phase in, for as the missile dollars increase we can forecast ultimately a reduction in the aircraft dollars.

This is an extremely important matter for unless this is accomplished we will find ourselves over facilitated. In such an event, the high cost of maintaining and operating all present aircraft plants at a low level of production will certainly strain our limited budgets and we will find an increasing percentage of taxpayers and industry's funds going into non-productive overhead.

THE OLD BUG-A-BOO of reliability increases many fold in importance in our missiles programs. Much has been said and written about reliability in the past few months and unless industry accepts this new challenge we can never really enter the missiles era. No longer is the human brain available to correct for failures of items to perform in the combat. A failure of a single component probably will mean the failure of the mission.

In addition, we cannot afford long testing hours and innumerable test flights such as we have in our manned aircraft. Our missiles must be reliable and must accomplish the mission on the first try. Any efforts on the part of industry to overcome the reliability problem will be repaid many fold in business and profits as we move into the missiles era.

Along with increased complexity of our weapons, shorter and fewer testing operations, and increased number of changes to our missiles during development and production, it is essential that the development, engineering and production sides of our organizations work more closely together than ever before. The barriers between the design engineers and the production engineers must be dissolved. Likewise, it is incumbent upon us in the Air Force to insure that our production people in AMC and our engineering personnel in ARDC work even more closely together than ever before to insure the best possible final missile product.

Not only must we work closely together but we must recognize the need for more highly qualified personnel in support of missile operations. Even though "one shot" in nature a missile still must be ready to go instantly and must be maintained continuously.

THE COMPLEXITY OF MISSILES will undoubtedly require more highly qualified support in depot level maintenance from the missile manufacturer. The average length of service of our airmen does not give us sufficient time to train him and utilize him effectively for this highly technical function.

Even in operations and field maintenance of the missile, unless industry simplifies some of the missile systems now under development we will be unable to operate them, much less to maintain them without scientific or highly qualified engineering personnel at the operational sites themselves.

Even under the most optimum conditions, it will be difficult for us to support complex missile systems at operational level with airmen without more adequate incentives for our military personnel.

These are some of the new problems that we must recognize in our Air Force and industry as we move gradually into the guided missiles era. Altogether, they spell a very substantial load and change in concept for our industry. We have no concern that the Air Force working closely with industry can accomplish this transition. During the past decade we have made almost miraculous advancements in the state of the art and in our combat capability, even though aviation has been a growing industry. Nine years ago Air Force military sales were nearly 600 million dollars. Today, they are 7 billion 76 million. Nine years ago we had 239,000 workers, today we have 751,000. Today our industry is strong virile and ready to meet any challenge.

I'm sure we can with full justification predict without question tremendous breakthroughs in research, development and production which will certainly not only meet our new challenges, but will surpass all our past accomplishments.

Therefore, I am sure that we can predict the stronger and greater air strength that is so necessary to maintenance of air superiority in the critical years ahead of us.

Gift To Academy

The U.S. Air Force Academy has been presented a scale model of Professor Samuel P. Langley's "Aerodrome," early day airplane used in tests, by Edwin A. Link, inventor of Link Trainers and Flight Simulators used by the AF to train its pilots.

The scale model is constructed of gold alloy and gold-plated silver, duplicating the gasoline engine powered machine used in tests in 1903.

HUNDREDS OF PERMANENT PROMOTIONS to lieutenant colonel in the Regular Army were delayed for months because of a legal requirement that many think should be restudied. Here's what happened. After the selection board had made its recommendations, which were approved by the Secretary and the President, several of the officers selected became involved in difficulties which barred their promotion. Board action, reviews, appeals, etc., took weeks. MEANTIME ALL ADVANCEMENTS for officers who were junior on the recommended list had to be held up, until (1) the officers whose promotions had been stopped left the Service or (2) were removed from the recommended list—which action can be taken only by the President. SOME OFFICERS SUGGEST that a method should be devised to permit the normal flow of promotions while individual problem cases are being decided, one way or the other.

THE NAVY LEAGUE plans a stepped-up national, regional and local public information program in behalf of the Navy and Marine Corps. You can also watch for the Air Force Association and the expanding Association of the U.S. Army to conduct vigorous public information activities during the forthcoming months, particularly in the critical area of the military budget. ONE MAJOR PROPOSAL to be advocated by the Navy League is the establishment of a fifth major fleet to augment forces in the Atlantic, Pacific, Western Pacific and Mediterranean. The new fleet would be stationed in the "vast Indian Ocean area or such other location as conditions may warrant," according to a resolution voted by League leaders at New Orleans last week.

AIR FORCE AND NAVY READINESS for any emergency has been demonstrated during the past several weeks by news stories telling of SAC operational exercises and fleet tests in the Atlantic, Mediterranean and Pacific. THE ARMY joined in this week with a '56 Progress Report from Sec'y Brucker which states in part: "In the continental United States, strategic Army forces are held in a high state of readiness to reinforce our overseas garrisons or to intervene directly in other areas if the need arises." As reported here previously, the Army is going to intensify that word "strategic" in talking about so-called mobile forces in the ZI. ARMY LEADERS MUST EXPECT stiff questioning on Capitol Hill as to the state of readiness of the "strategic" forces.

INCREASING EMPHASIS on development of specialized atomic capability units in all the Services will prompt some commanders to urge wider use of the "spot promotion" system now in effect for the Strategic Air Command. This permits higher rank (about 700 officers) for persons in lead positions. The rest of the Air Force, and the other Services as well, maintain that the idea should be studied for across-the-board implementation.

THE SERVICES WILL BE USING larger numbers of civilian technical representatives from industry with operational units in the field as new missile units are activated and other high performance weapons are sent to the field. There's some argument now as to how to budget for the "tech reps"; whether to make this a research and development or procurement cost, or whether to assess the charge against the combat command to which they are assigned.

LINE AND SUPPLY FORCES are getting set for a new round of controversy in the Army. It has to do with the new command structure being tried out in the 101st Airborne Division (Page Three). LOGISTICS EXPERTS are certain to contend that the head of the Support Group should be a technical service officer; present prevailing feeling is that a line officer, backed by a skilled technical staff, will be able to back up combat units with more effective logistic support because of his knowledge of their needs. THIS ISSUE undoubtedly will be a highlight of the Jump Light Test final evaluation report.

THE FAMED 82d AIRBORNE DIVISION is expected to begin converting from the three regiment organization to the new "Pentana" five combat group concept early next year. It's significant that the 82d's new CG is Brig. Gen. (soon to be Maj. Gen.) John W. Bowen, USA, who went to Ft. Bragg, N. C., from the streamlined 101st Airborne Division at Ft. Campbell, Ky.

PRESIDENT EISENHOWER, who in past messages to Congress, has talked about plans for developing smaller-sized Army units for Atomic Age assignments, is expected to touch on the 101st Airborne Division at Ft. Campbell, Ky., and the Southern European Task Force (SETAF) at Verona, Italy, in his forthcoming reports to Capitol Hill. The Chief Executive will have an opportunity to receive a first-hand briefing on SETAF. Its first commander, Brig. Gen. John H. Michaelis, soon to be major general, and who is a former Senior Aide to General Eisenhower, has just arrived in Washington to take up duties as Army Legislative Liaison Chief.

SERVICE LEADERS ARE HOPEFUL the Cordiner Committee will recommend increased use of Government-appropriated funds to provide improved recreational facilities for Servicemen throughout the world. Concern is being expressed because of a decline in Welfare Fund profits, which are used for morale and recreation purposes. IT'S BEEN KEPT BEHIND CLOSED DOORS, but a number of top commanders overseas have protested vigorously a Pentagon plan that would reduce Welfare Fund allocations for many Army and Air Force areas overseas in order to achieve an across-the-board split on a world-wide basis. COMMANDERS OVERSEAS are contending that (1) military families abroad create more profits for the Welfare Fund than in the United States because they spend more money through the Exchanges and Film Service, and (2) that with relatively fewer recreational facilities abroad, there is need for the higher dividends of the past. IN EUROPE, there is another interesting angle to the "dividends" problem. This concerns the jealousy of many Army people over facilities at some Air Force officer clubs. One of the reasons for this situation is the fact that slot machines are barred by the Army, but are found at some Air Force bases.

PSYCHOLOGICAL WARFARE will become an obsolete Army term. The Office of the Chief of Psychological Warfare has been redesignated Office of the Chief of Special Warfare.

Arctic Night To Northern Light

Col. Osmund Leahy, USA, Commander of the 505th Airborne Infantry Regiment, and a six-man planning group has left Ft. Bragg, N. C., for Ft. Richardson, Alaska, for a 10-day conference with the Alaskan Command on Exercise Northern Light.

The 505th is scheduled to take part in Northern Light, which as next year's counterpart to this year's "Arctic Light" in Greenland will train the troops to function in the Arctic. The Regiment will jump during the exercise, which takes place from mid-February to 28 March.

Members of the planning group, in addition to Colonel Leahy, are Lt. Col. Edmund L. Mueller, commander of the 505th's third battalion, and the Regiment's foremost authority on the Arctic; Lt. Col. Herbert G. Peabody, second battalion commander; Maj. Emil A. Zaul, assistant operations officer for the 82d Airborne Division; Maj. Bruce Stasser, Regimental operations officer; Maj. Edgar Bronnenberg, Regimental supply officer; and Capt. Tomray Boltinghouse, Regimental communications officer.

Mustering-Out Payments

The Comptroller General has ruled (decision B-129089), that a Reserve officer who was separated from active duty on or after 1 June 1945, for the purpose of appointment in the Regular Army is entitled to mustering-out payment, if otherwise eligible, and that any regulation purporting to deny mustering-out payment to such a member would be inconsistent with the pertinent statutory provisions.

Claims for retroactive payments should be submitted to the Settlements Operations, Finance Center, U.S. Army, Indianapolis 49, Ind., under the provisions of paragraph 16e, AR 35-1340, the Army said in Circular 35-96.

No-Accident Record

Hits New Mark

The number of SAC bases in the ZI that flew safely with neither major nor minor accident to mar their records reached a total of 30 in October, a new high for a month, Col. Ralph W. Stanley, SAC safety division chief has announced. The base with the best accident-free record is Travis AFB, Cal. There have been no incidents at Travis since July 1954.

Three other bases, Loring, Little Rock, and Fairchild, have had clean slates since the summer of '55, while Pinecastle personnel have flown safely since January '56, opening month of the Safe Aircraft Campaign for '56.

Other safe-flying bases are: Ellsworth, Dow, Abilene, Plattsburgh, Homestead, Davis-Monthan, Altus, Tinker, Biggs, Carswell, Ramey, Lincoln, Mountain Home, Smoky Hill, Forbes, Offutt, Larson, Turner, Malmstrom, Bergstrom, Castle, Westover, Whiteman, Walker, and Portsmouth.

Miss Sumati, sister of the Indonesian Ambassador to London, delighted the members with the fascinating "lullaby dance," using a doll and parasol. The dances were accompanied by the music of the gamelan, an orchestra composed of gongs, chimes, drums and cymbals. Mrs. Henry P. Hewitt was in charge of the program, assisted by Mrs. Edmund R. Verdieck.

An informal showing of fashions was viewed during the luncheon, with members of the Club modeling, including Mesdames Joseph S. Bleymaier, Fred N. Mortenson, Millville Beardsley, G. E. Yale and Warren S. Bradford.

Brig. Gen. J. M. Eager, USA-Ret.

Graveside services were held 19 Nov. at Arlington National Cemetery for Brig. Gen. John Macauley Eager, USA, Ret., aged 67, who died 15 Nov. at Walter Reed Army Hospital, Washington, D. C., after a long illness. He was a former military aide to Presidents Coolidge and Hoover.

General Eager, who retired in 1945, was in command of 100,000 Italian war prisoners during WW II. Prior to that he was Chief of Staff of the Fifth Service Command, Columbus, O.

A brother-in-law of former U. S. Senator Millard E. Tydings (D-Md) and a descendant of General John Eager Howard, famed Revolutionary War soldier, General Eager was graduated from Harvard in 1912 and commissioned in the Army a year later. From 1920 to 1923, he served in Rome as U. S. Military attaché. He was editor of the Field Artillery Journal from 1928 through 1932.

He is survived by his widow, Kathryn Tydings Eager, who lives at 6301 Broad Branch Rd., Chevy Chase, Md.; two children, John, Jr., a Harvard student, and Mary, a student at Madeira school, and a brother, Howard, of Norfolk, Va.

VAdm. R. A. Ofstie, USN

VAdm. Ralph A. Ofstie, USN, 59, former chief of staff and aide to the commander of Naval Forces in the Far East, died after a long illness 18 Nov. at Bethesda Naval Hospital.

A veteran of both WW II and the Korean War, Admiral Ofstie had been hospitalized since last March. He was a pioneer Naval aviator and held several seaplane records.

During WW II, Admiral Ofstie was commanding officer of the aircraft carrier Essex during several Pacific campaigns. He later was commander of Carrier Divisions 26 and 22 in 1944 and 1945.

During the post-war years he was senior naval member of the U. S. Strategic Bombing Survey and head of the Navy Department's Naval Analysis Division. He was assigned additional duty as Navy Member of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Evaluation Board for the atomic bomb test in 1946. The following year he was a member of group of high-ranking Naval officers who opposed the formation of a separate Air Force.

During the Korean War, he was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal as commander of Task Force 77, and the Gold Star in lieu of a second Distinguished Service Medal as Chief of Staff in the Far East.

In June, 1952, Admiral Ofstie assumed command of the First Fleet, and the next year became Deputy Chief of Naval Operations for Air. He served as Commander of the Sixth Fleet from March, 1955, until his admittance to Bethesda Naval Hospital last spring.

A native of Wisconsin, Admiral Ofstie was a graduate of the 1918 U. S. Naval Academy Class.

He is survived by his wife, Joy Bright Hancock Ofstie, former director of WAVES, who lives at 3516 N. Valley St., Arlington, Va.; his mother, a sister and a brother.

Radiation-Processed Foods Promise Means Of Preserving Fresh Rations

A new concept of food processing for the Armed Forces has been introduced by the availability of nuclear energy for the preservation of food.

This was the subject of a presentation made at the convention of Military Surgeons last week by Dr. H. F. Kraybill of the Medical Nutrition Laboratory, Fitzsimons Army Hospital, Denver, and Col. Tyrone E. Huber, MC, USA, of the Research and Development Division, Office of the Army Surgeon General.

They told the convention that nuclear energy may provide a means of preserving military ration items in the original fresh state without sustaining any of the structural impairment caused by heat sterilization.

Here are some of their findings:

- On the basis of animal and human feeding experiments conducted thus far, radiation sterilized foods and radiation preserved foods have not been found toxic.

- Radiation-processed foods are just as nutritious as heat-processed foods.

- The life span of test animals fed irradiated foods remained the same as that of animals fed heat-processed foods.

To the military, Doctor Kraybill and Colonel Huber said, radiation preservation of foods offers the advantages of increasing the supply of perishable foods by extending the shelf-life of perishable vegetables and meats without refrigeration, minimizing storage costs of potatoes and onions by inhibition of sprouting and conserving the supply of cereal products in storage through destruction of insect infestation.

Production Continues On "SeaMaster" Jets

The Navy reports that production work on 24 "SeaMaster" jets will be continued but that the delivery date of the first plane might be delayed until Glenn L. Martin Co., Baltimore, Md., technicians "get the bugs" out of the design which caused the crash of two experimental models.

On 31 August, Martin was awarded a $102 million contract for the 24 "SeaMasters." The planes will be equipped for bombing and mine-laying missions. They are able to carry payloads of more than 30,000 pounds. The ships are 134 feet long and have wing spans of 100 feet.

The second experimental "SeaMaster" was destroyed 9 Nov. in the sky near Dover, Del. The first P6M disintegrated in mid-air on 7 Dec. 1955, scattering wreckage into the Chesapeake Bay at the mouth of the Potomac River. Her crew of three Martin employees and one Navy officer was killed in the accident.

In the second crash, however, no lives were lost. The plane's crew, made up of four Martin employees—Robert S. Turner, pilot; William Cunningham, co-pilot, and Thomas Kenney and William Compton, flight test engineers—all parachuted to safety before the ship fell apart.

In an official statement concerning the crash, the Navy said:

"The P6M was flying at an altitude of about 21,000 feet and was traveling at a speed of about Mach .88 (approximately 540 knots) in level flight, having slowed from a higher speed.

"The plane went into a tight inside loop against the full opposite control by the pilot. Telemetering information showed that the horizontal control surfaces at the tail did not follow the pilot's control but moved to a full leading edge down position, a position which would cause the loop. The plane was subjected to somewhat greater than 9 times the force of gravity, and went out of control.

"The crew ejected during the loop.

"The plane fell off into a downward spiral. It broke up at about 8,000 feet altitude, the pieces falling on land where they can be recovered and analyzed."

Lear Flight System On Lockheed Missile

Lear, Inc., has been given permission by the USAF to disclose that the flight control system for Lockheed's X-7 missile, a supersonic ramjet-powered test vehicle, has been supplied by Lear since inception of the project in 1949.

After launching from a B-29, and after being accelerated to ramjet operating speed by rocket, this missile performs its prescribed test mission and then is decelerated and recovered by parachutes. After servicing, it is normally ready shortly later for another flight.

Missile Systems Chief

L. Eugene Root, widely known in research and development circles, has been appointed vice president of Lockheed Aircraft Corporation and general manager of its expanding Missile Systems division.

A former top executive in the Rand Corporation and chairman of the aerodynamics advisory panel of AEC at Los Alamos, Mr. Root brings 20 years of outstanding experience in aerodynamic design, air weapons research, and military systems and operational analysis to his new post, according to Courtlandt S. Gross, president of Lockheed, who announced the appointment.

Mr. Root will succeed Lockheed Senior Vice President Hall L. Hibbard who has been pro tem director of the division during this year.

Mr. Gross said that Herschel J. Brown, who has been acting assistant general manager of the missile division, has been appointed permanently to that position.

A specialist in air weapons research, Mr. Root for three years was an advisor to the USAF Institute in this field and a lecturer at the Guggenheim Aeronautical Laboratory at Caltech. He also served on special assignment to the Secretary of Defense and as special assistant to the USAF Deputy Chief of Staff for Development.

He has been a member of the Scientific Advisory Board to the USAF Chief of Staff for the past seven years and a consultant to the Assistant Secretary of Defense for Research and Development for the past three years.

Col. Jacobs Wins Wellcome Medal; Capt. Poos Takes Gorgas Award

Three Army officers, a Navy officer and a Veterans Administration hospital official took the top awards at this year's convention of the Association of Military Surgeons.

The Sir Henry Wellcome Medal and Prize went to Col. Eugene C. Jacobs, MC, USA, Commanding Officer of the U. S. Army Hospital, Ft. Monroe, Va. Colonel Jacobs received the coveted award for his essay, "Tuberculosis: Yet an Unconquered Disease," which will be published in the January issue of Military Medicine.

The Gorgas Medal winner for 1956 is Capt. Robert S. Poos, MC, USN, officer in charge of U. S. Navy Preventive Medicine Unit No. 6 in Hawaii. Captain Poos received the medal for his outstanding contributions to the control of poliomyelitis among Naval personnel and their dependents in Hawaii, and to the use of Salk vaccine under epidemic conditions.

Dr. George M. Lyon, Manager of the

VA Hospital, Huntington, W. Va., received the Louis Livingston Seaman Prize for an article on radiation injuries.

Honorable Mention in the Wellcome Medal and Prize contest went to Lt. Col. Joseph V. Conroy, MC, USA, Ft. Dix, N. J.

Former Asst. Sec. Navy Wins Wright Trophy

Dr. Edward Pearson Warner, President of the Council of the International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO), has been selected unanimously as the recipient of the Wright Brothers Memorial Trophy for 1956, Thomas G. Lanphier, jr., President of the National Aeronautic Association announces.

The Wright Brothers Memorial Trophy, administered by the National Aeronautic Association, has been awarded annually since 1948 "for significant public service of enduring value to aviation in the United States."

"It seems particularly appropriate that the Wright Memorial Trophy be awarded to Dr. Warner as he leaves his high post as Council President of ICAO, where he has served with brilliant success for more than 10 years," Lanphier said.

As Chief Physicist of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics immediately after World War I, Dr. Warner directed aerodynamic research at the laboratory which the NACA had just established at Langley Field, Va., and started the agency's first flight researches and the construction of its first wind tunnel.

From 1926 to 1929, during the Coolidge administration, he was Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Aeronautics.

U. S. COAST GUARD

Commandant—Vice Adm. Alfred C. Richmond
Secretary of The Treasury—George M. Humphrey

HEADQUARTERS recently concluded a check of officers' leave balances with the balances shown on July Personnel Diaries.

The review showed that approximately 400 accounts failed to balance. The majority of the discrepancies have been corrected by correspondence.

To prevent the necessity of added paperwork in the future, the Commandant calls to the attention of all officers the provisions in the Personnel Manual and the Personnel Accounting Manual. These instructions, says Headquarters, should be followed closely in order to insure the accuracy of leave records.

The chief reasons for past discrepancies are due to:

- Failure to enter on Diaries leave taken enroute on transfers.
- Failure to carry forward the unused leave balance of enlisted personnel promoted to officer status. Crediting of earned leave on date of appointment often results in double credit at the end of the fiscal year.
- Non-compliance with instruction 2a on Form CG-2519, "Application for leave of Absence," which states that one copy shall be forwarded to the Commandant (PO) immediately upon return.

- Crediting a fractional day as a whole day. This credit applies only to Separation and Discharge as provided in 7-A-60(d) of the Personnel Manual.

DSM For Gen. Simon

The Distinguished Service Medal was presented to Maj. Gen. Leslie E. Simon, USA-Ret., on 16 November by Lt. Gen. E. L. Cummings, USA, Chief of Army Ordnance.

General Simon, who retired last November, has been cited for his accomplishments as Assistant Chief of Army Ordnance and Chief of its Research and Development Division, from 12 Dec 1949 to 11 Nov 1955.

General Simon, 56, is now Director of Research and Development for the Carborundum Company, Niagara Falls, N. Y., and a director and member of the planning board of the Gruen Precision Laboratories, Inc., Cincinnati, Ohio.

The citation:

"Major General Simon performed distinguished service in a duty of great responsibility as Assistant Chief of Ordnance and as Chief of the Research and Development Division, Office of the Chief of Ordnance, during the period from 12 December 1949 to 11 November 1955. He distinguished himself especially by reorienting the Ordnance weapons development program to the solution of the most urgent weapons threat the Ground Forces then faced. This reorientation has resulted in specific weapons, now in the hands of troops, which are a major deterrent to possible aggression. At the same time, he equally distinguished himself by the creation of a capable Research and Development organization alert to keeping future development of weapons in pace with technology. General Simon's analysis of broad problems of organization, his direction to technical effort, and his dynamic leadership within his organization have resulted in a series of achievements of primary national importance which reflect great credit upon himself and the military service."

Streamlined 101st

Test Jump Light calls for all exercises to be conducted either at Ft. Campbell or at Ft. Bragg, N. C.

Obviously, the 101st will not be tested in its ability to move over an extended distance. At Campbell, officers and non-commissioned officers feel that such tests are essential to bring the combat groups and the division to a true "strategic" readiness.

At the Pentagon, it is learned that top Army planners are hopeful plans can be developed for shifting highly mobile, specialized Army units to and from overseas points in periodic readiness tests, similar to those conducted by the Strategic Air Command.

There is little doubt that the PEN-TANA concept of the 101st is a first step in that direction.

There will be more said about this mobility problem when Troop Test Jump Light is completed and the Army's other airborne divisions—as well as infantry and armored divisions—are reorganized to meet current demands for speedy movement to troubled spots; instant deployment on arrival, selective application of power, either conventional or atomic, and a fast-moving withdrawal or relocation of the striking force to deny the enemy a successful counter-attack.

(In subsequent issues, The Journal will publish periodic reports on the 101st Airborne Division and Troop Test Jump Light).

Ta'e Insurance Posts

The United Services Life Insurance Company of Washington, D. C. announces the appointment of two new representatives—Brig. Gen. George Patrick Lynch, USA-Ret., and Col. Carl G. Paulsen, USA-Ret., to provide additional life insurance service to commissioned officers. General Lynch will be the first United Services representative in Europe, with Headquarters at Munich, Germany. Prior to retirement he served as Commanding Officer of the 6th Infantry Regiment in Berlin and Headquarters Commandant, EUROM.

Colonel Paulsen will represent United Services at Aberdeen Proving Grounds, Edgewood Arsenal, and the U. S. Naval Training Center, all in Maryland.

THE CAT* NO. 12...

BOSS OF 500 MILES OF NAPA COUNTY ROADS

Today this Caterpillar No. 12 Motor Grader is re-constructing a half-mile stretch of Atlas Peak Road for Napa County, Calif. Tomorrow it may be quite a distance away. It, together with four other Cat Motor Graders, maintains over 500 miles of Napa County roads.

Like all Cat Motor Graders, it has been designed to yield the maximum production per tax dollar. But it has other economy factors, too. R. P. O'Neill, Napa County engineer and road commissioner, lists these money-saving reasons for buying the No. 12.

1. Low maintenance costs.
2. High trade-in value.
3. Availability of service and parts.

And now this versatile public servant has important new features for even lower operating costs.

New tubeless tires are available at no extra cost. Not only do they eliminate 80% of down time caused by tire trouble, but they are easier to mount and give better puncture and blowout protection.

Exclusive new oil clutch can operate up to 1500 hours without adjustment. Clutch fade is greatly reduced and facings wear an average of only 2½ thousandths of an inch per 1000 hours of operation.

Here, too, is a machine that is kind to operators. Nothing blocks their view of the blade because of the low frame design and convenient placement of lift gears on the dashboard. Direct electric in-seat starting is another new optional convenience with simple controls right beside the operator.

For high production, low maintenance costs, ease of operation and long work life, the Caterpillar No. 12 Motor Grader has earned its reputation as the world's standard machine in its field.
